

Hermes Huang
Yale University

Hermes Huang is a graduate student in Prof. Richard Chang's group at Yale University. He received his B.S. in applied physics from California Institute of Technology in 2004. In the past, he has worked on projects ranging from silica microdisk fabrication to electrospray in conjunction with microfluidic devices. He is currently working on single-particle fluorescence detection systems.